NUMBER 22.

Republican Mass Meeting.

One of the largest attendance ever at a Bourbon county convention was that on Saturday afternoon when the Republicans assembled on the court house steps and in front of the building to select delegates to attend the District Convention to be held at Mt. Sterling, on April 24, to nominate a candidate for Railroad Commissioner. Under the management of a new leader of the party, Mr. George W. Stuart, everything was in perfect running order. He had his forces ready for the battle, when the opposing forces, seeing what they had to go against, made a hasty retreat.

In the absence of Chairman Yerkes, Secretary Wyatt Thompson called the meeting to order promptly at 1:30 o'clock and W. A. Thomason was elected temporary and subsequently permanent chairman. The following resolutions were offered by Mr. Stuart and adopted without contest:

Resolved, That the delegates selected at this convention vote as a unit on all questions and that they cast the vote of this county for Adam T. Siler, of Whitley county, at the railroad convention to be held in Mt. Sterling on April 24, so long as his name appears before said convention and that they use all honorable means to secure his nomination.

Resolved, That the following named persons be and are hereby appointed delegates to said convention: Wyatt Thompson, Henry S. Clay, J. W. Larkin, A. B. Thomason, Charles Hough, Morin Moore, Henry Smith, J. L. Earlywine, W. W. Cherry, D. M. Hurst, John D. Shy, Stamps Moore, French Thompson, James Bacon, Frank Jones, J. E. Gray, C. J. Barnes, George Nelson, J. D. Turley, Robert H. Bishop, James Porter and George W. Stuart.

Be it further resolved, That we call upon the Hon. W. O. Bradley to make the race for United States Senator, and the Hon. Augustus E. Willson to make the race for Governor, and we heartily endorse their candidacy and pledge them our hearty support.

Committee To Select Site.

The Hospital Circle met Saturday afternoon at the court house and follow-up committee was appointed to buy a lot for the new hospital. Mesdames J. Arnsberger, M. H. Daily and William Kenney. Several locations have been suggested, and it is thought the committee will select a lot on Cypress street now owned by Mrs. Frank Fithian.

Owensboro Votes "Wet."

By a majority of 442 votes the people of Owensboro voted in favor of open saloons in that city Saturday, after one of the hardest-fought battles of ballots ever seen in that city. During the entire day thousands of women and children paraded the streets with banners and prayers were offered continuously. The whisky forces of the entire State were enlisted in support of the "wets," and their organization was almost perfect. The negro vote played a prominent part in the result.

Farm Sold.

Auctioneer M. F. Kenney sold Saturday for Master Commissioner Russell Mann, the Maston farm of 59 acres near Black's Cross Roads, to Richard Harrington, for $85 per acre.

A Brace of Artists.

The entertainment tendered by A. J. Lovely Co., No. 34, U. R. K. of P., at the Paris Grand Opera House, Friday night, proved to be one of those occasions where art prevailed, to the edification of those who heard and saw.

Miss Mannheim is a reader of exceptional talent and accomplishment. In her interpretation of "The Lion and the Mouse," she exhibited that rare gift of being able to repeat a fascinating story interestingly. In short, she is an elocutionist of Thespian taste, who can and does both instruct and entertain.

Miss Adele Wertfield, at the piano, completed the personnel of artists, and to those who read in melody she spoke in thrilling accents from the masters. Her technique and personal appearance are very impressive and win the sympathy of the audience at once. Of Miss Wertfield's playing it might be said that when her hands swept the polished keys with impassioned, almost inspired fingers, the sonorous tones of the piano glided away in rippling murmurings of broken loveliness and her auditors felt glad for the divine impulse of the heaven-born art.

Frank King Dead.

Mr. Frank King, aged about 24, died of consumption, at 7 o'clock Saturday morning at the home of his aunt, Mrs. William Stevenson, at Maysville. Frank will be remembered as one of Maysville's best young men. He was a member of the Central Presbyterian church and a Christian Endeavor worker, being at one time President of that society. Maysville Bulletin.

The deceased was a nephew of Mrs. Omar G. Lytle, of this city.

Your pantry is not complete without a sack of E. F. Spears & Sons' Red Cross Flour. 8-tf

Bourbon Growers in Earnest.

At the meeting of the Bourbon Board of Control Saturday, at the court house nothing was given out for publication, but the secretaries from the various precincts were on hand and submitted figures. We ascertained, however, that the aggregate of 3,100 acres, which is 75 per cent. of the total acreage of Bourbon had been signed to the society. The tobacco growers are in dead earnest this time and it is the only way to win out.

Thrown From Buggy and Badly Bruised.

While Miss Anna Thornton was out driving Sunday afternoon, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Anna Thornton, her horse became frightened on South Main and began plunging and rearing. Part of the harness broke and the buggy running up on him caused him to begin kicking. Mr. Dan Peed was near by and grabbed the frightened animal by the bridle and the sudden stop threw both ladies to the street bruising them severely, but breaking no bones. If it had not been for Mr. Peed, it would have surely terminated in a serious accident. The dash board of the buggy was kicked off.

Should Be Stopped.

The shade trees on our streets and the new streets recently made are being badly damaged by persons hitching their horses to nearly every tree and telephone pole in the city. We think there is an ordinance concerning this matter, if not, there should be.

Five Additions.

There were five additions to the Second Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

Political Pick-Ups.

The Peace Congress has commenced with a serious disagreement between Andrew Carnegie and Mr. Roosevelt. Let us have peace, if we have to fight for it.

The railroad slaughter still keeps up the pace for the March reports. Inform us of fifty-three wrecks and ninety-two deaths. This comes of Wall Street managing railroads.

Senator Scott says Taft is not a candidate for President. Then why is his brother making such a fuss in Ohio and why is Senator Foraker ringing in fire alarms to arouse his machine to action.

The King of Belgium has been politically bunched out of an immense concession in the Congo Free State to a Wall Street syndicate, hoping to win favor with Americans in the investigation of the Congo scandals.

That vociferous Republican organ the New York Press thinks President Roosevelt should keep his hands off the next national convention and that nothing could be more unfortunate than that he "intends to name his successor."

We can all agree with President Roosevelt upon his advice to the children to plant trees on Arbor Day; even Foraker and Taft will say "amen" to that, for this country will eventually be a desert unless tree planting is attended to.

Secretary Boanaparte and President Roosevelt have come to the conclusion, long held by some other people, that all whisky is good, but some whisky is better than other whisky. Under the new Pure Food law whisky is to be branded accordingly.

The Constitution is not to follow the flag into Porto Rico, if Republican statesmen can have their way, for Secretary Taft tells the people of that island that they must be satisfied with free trade with the United States and not expect self-government.

If we grant Germany the right to appraise the value of the goods she exports to us. What will the other countries think when the value of their exports are arbitrarily raised? Under an ad valorem duty, advancing the value of the goods increases the tariff tax.

The railroads are threatening to abolish commutation tickets in Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania because those states have enacted laws for two cent passenger fare. To do so will only hasten the building of more trolley lines, which will carry commuters for about one cent a mile.

Somehow the state legislatures of the great Republican states don't seem to endorse the President as he expected. The factional fight in the Republican party is getting as wide as a barn door.

The President is getting very vindictive with his old friend: "My Dear Harriman," by urging the Interstate Commerce Commission "to put him in jail." He does not deserve it any more now than he did when President Roosevelt was writing him almost daily to come and see him and save New York.

The man who recently printed 30 ways of curing a cold, did not exhaust the list. There are as many ways of curing a cold as a person has friends. Ever notice how every friend you meet, when your nose is stuffed up and you are wheezing like a broken down locomotive on an up grade, is ready to undertake the cure of your cold with a guaranteed remedy that will knock it sky high?

A few days ago a friend accused me of hilly-ity every time a preacher was charged in public with breaking one of the Ten Commandments, but I pleaded in return that it was merely human nature breaking out—not in the preacher, but in myself. Every body is tickled when a preacher goes wrong—including the preacher, who feels better over it than anybody else. We don't care so much about the lapse, as a lapse, but you know we resent the preacher's superiority and we are glad to see him get it in the neck. Every body feels jolly when a doctor gets sick, or a policeman is arrested, or when an editor, that human regulator of the ties and movements of the moon and stars, makes a mistake. When it is rumored that Mary Baker Eddy, chief of the faith curists and Christian Scientists, who hold that there is never anything and that therefore there is nothing the matter with nothing, was dead, there was a thrill of relief. We felt happy because we didn't like her assumed command over error, disease and death. That she didn't die was no fault of ours. We still have

Every spring we hear somebody say:
"Oh, we'll have good weather after Easter." Yes, a good while after Easter this time.

That Chicago woman who touched the hem of the shroud of the late Dowd with the belief that it would cure her of falling sickness, and then tumbled over in a faint, might have known the thing wouldn't work. The prophet alive was a hard enough proposition to work a touch on.

Let us hope Congressmen will not take it into their heads to distribute more tree seeds just because they have given themselves a raise in salary.

"The daintiest thing in shirt waists; what it is and how made," is the title of a discussion of spring fashions. Dunno what the answer is, but our guess is the girl.

"I have an unusually intelligent dog," said the man who likes to spin yarns when with a party of friends. "He was taught to say his prayers, and if you'll believe me, that dog now wags his tail whenever he sees a minister anywhere near him."

"I have a dog with even more intelligence than that," quietly returned a member of the party. "One day when he got out in the street some mischievous boy tied a tin can to his tail, and if you'll believe me, that dog headed for the nearest saloon and backed up to the bar."

"Advertising is no good," said the man in old clothes. "It never helped me none."

The merchant smiled. "That is because you tried it, old fellow," he said. "As the Indian tried the feather bed. An Indian took a feather, placed it on a plank and slept on it all night. In the morning he growled: 'Paleface say feathers heap soft. Paleface heap big fool, ugh.'"

Miss Main Street: "You are certainly polite, Johnnie. You pass me and never look at me!"
Johnnie High Street: "Ah, if I had looked at you I never could have passed by."

A Kentucky editor, who had been married two weeks, gives vent to his experience on the matrimonial sea in the following poetic language: "We'd rather live on Cat Island with a parrot for a mate and have sand blisters on each of our toes than to dwell in Paradise and wear silk slippers with a woman who peats."

In a bribery case, recently in progress in the Texas Legislature, "Ball & Batts, appeared for the defense. It is believed that they will win at this fortuitous season."

The soul is an uncomfortable gift, bestowed on man without his leave, to distinguish him from the beasts, and make him wish he were a cow. Genius, which is the soul in its transcendent reaches, is the most uncomfortable gift of all.

In virtue of our animal nature we may know genuine pleasures. In virtue of our soul, we may only conceive anxieties, and gain no nearer approach to pleasure than lies in the occasional relief thereof. As for genius, it may not count, with assurance, on even the drunken delight of applause. Its lot is mightily more apt to be the wretchedness of conscious neglect. It is thought that Adam partook of the fruit of the tree of knowledge in the hope of getting to know what we are here for. But whether or no, he never found out, nor has anybody found out, though prophets, poets and philosophers have been guessing ever since.

Microbes in everything you eat and if you eat and drink microbes you will surely die, and if you don't eat and drink you will still more surely die. Bound to surely die in any event. You had better pay no more attention to microbes than your grandfather did. They ate and drank everything they wanted, and they lived long and prospered. What did Methuselah know about microbes in his time? Eat and drink everything you want, microbes and all, and you will live until you die and that is what old Methuselah did—he lived until he died.

The Hilltop correspondent of a Flemingsburg paper writes that the well-known Upper Blue Lick spring has ceased to flow. This is in the nature of a misfortune, but possibly it is a judgment on the proprietors who have been charging such high rates for the water.

The Left Hand.

It is strange that so strong a prejudice against the left hand has lived and increased for centuries when there is no natural or physiological reason for it. Examination of the skeleton of a person who was strong, healthy and well formed in life shows that the bones of the left hand and arm are just as large and capable as those of the right. The study of physiology shows, too, that the muscles and ligaments and cartilages that fastened that person's arms to his body and gave them the power of motion were made to do their work just as well on one side of the body as on the other. If the left side was the weaker, it was because of the failure to exercise it as freely as the other.—Scrap Book.

Lamb's Unkind Thrust.

Charles Lamb, than whom no gentler or kinder hearted wit ever breathed, at times found it impossible to restrain himself from the personal, as, for instance, when he covered a friend with shame at a whist party by blurring out:

"Gad, James, if it dirt were to-trump, what a hand you would have!"

GOOD for OLD and YOUNG

August Flower keeps the children healthy and strong. Full of vigor and frolic the whole day long. So when Mamma needs more they rush off to high play. And shout to the druggist: "Please give it to me!"

Inability to get up brisk and fresh in the morning, lack of appetite, pallor, muddy complexion and poor spirits—these all indicate a disordered stomach and bad digestion—in adults and children, too. They also indicate the urgent need of taking Green's August Flower regularly for a few days.

It's a reliable old remedy for all stomach troubles, never fails to cure indigestion, dyspepsia and chronic constipation, and is a natural tonic for body and mind. Two sizes, 25c and 75c. All druggists.

Four Years Ahead of the Pure Drug Law!

There is one line of medicines in which no change in formulas is necessary in order to conform with Uncle Sam's new Pure Food and Drug Law. Rexall Remedies were made to conform with this law in every particular four years ago—long before this law was thought of!

At that time one thousand leading druggists of the country, owing to the unsatisfactory way in which they had to sell patent medicines, decided to form a co-operative company and manufacture a line of remedies for which they could stand absolutely responsible from their knowledge and control of ingredients in these cures.

The plan of Rexall Remedies was the result.

Could these thousand druggists then have foreseen the new Pure Food Law, and known every clause of it, they could not have made the Rexall plan conform to it more closely.

There is nothing secret about Rexall Remedies, and there never was!

For years Rexall ads have told the public that each Rexall druggist had the formula of every Rexall Remedy on file, and would willingly give any formula to whoever asked for it.

Moreover, Rexall Remedies protect you more than the Pure Food Law does. You now only know the dangerous drugs in patent medicines—we know and have always known everything in Rexall Remedies—and have always been glad to show you the printed complete formulas.

No Rexall Remedy is a "cure-all." Each of the 300 remedies has a formula which years of experience have shown to be the most reliable cure for a certain human ill.

The proof of our confidence in Rexall Remedies is the Rexall guarantee. Every Rexall sale we make is with the understanding that if the purchaser is dissatisfied he or she can get back the money paid, by simply returning the empty package or bottle. For four years the sincerity of this offer has never been challenged!

G. S. VARDEN & SON, DruggistsThe Rexall Store*The Willy Bell Boy.

A hotel man in New Hampshire was surprised to see one of his women guests come downstairs several nights running, fill her pitcher from the water cooler in the hall and return quietly to her room again. At first he thought the lady had some special reason for this queer performance. Then he thought he had better speak to her. Accordingly on the fourth or fifth night he approached her politely, took the pitcher from her hands and filled it himself.

"If you would ring, madam," he said, "this would always be done for you. There is no occasion for you ever to come down yourself for water. A ring!"

"But I have no bell," said the lady.

"Oh, madam, of course you have a bell. I'll show it to you."

And he carried the pitcher up to her room for her and pointed to the bell beside her bed.

"That is the bell," he said.

The lady started in surprise.

"That the bell?" she exclaimed.

"Why, the bell boy told me that was the fire alarm and I wasn't to touch it on any account except in case of fire."

About the Only Place.

A company of settlers in naming their new town called it Dictionary, because, as they said, "that's the only place where peace, prosperity and happiness are always found."

The notion of God which makes him a manufacturer of footstools, our enemies being the raw material, is still popular in some quarters.—Puck.

He Had the Most—Perhaps.

A comic actor who had been engaged to entertain a family party proposed at the conclusion of the performance a little game of his own. Each of the company, himself included, was to stake half a crown, and the pool would be taken by the person who possessed the most of the articles which he (the comedian) would inquire for. On his assurance that he would take no mean advantage, but run the same risk as the rest, all the members of the party consented, and between £3 and £1 was soon laid on the table. The actor added his piece to the pool, with a cunning smile, and then said:

"Now, which of you ladies and gentlemen happen to have the greatest number of false teeth?"

Deathlike silence reigned for about a minute, then a burst of laughter, both hearty and in some cases forced.

"I have three," continued the actor. "Who has got more?"

The comedian took the pool.—London Tit-Bits.

A few of the 300 famous REXALL Remedies, one for each human ill, are:

FOR CATARRH—MUCO-TONE

The chief ingredients of Muc-Tone are Gentian, Cissids, Cassia Sagarana, Glycine and Sassafras.

Gentian is so-called in medicine as one of the greatest tonic ever discovered. It combines the tonic powers of all known "bitters," with none of the disadvantages applying to any.

Cubeb have long been recognized as a specific in the treatment of all catarrhal conditions. Its action is prompt and its benefit almost invariably.

Cassia Sagarana is especially introduced for its unapproachable laxative properties.

The combination of these with glycerine and Sassafras makes Muc-Tone a remedy that attacks catarrh from every point and gradually restores the diseased tissues. Bottle, 50c.

A Literary Curiosity.

Some years ago a Paris newspaper ordered a story of adventure from a well known novelist. The price agreed upon was 1 franc a line. The novelist straightway hunted up an old man of letters—the unknown collaborator of many more famous authors—who agreed to write the story for 25 centimes a line. When the work had reached its second part in the course of publication the novelist learned that his old client was seriously ill. Hastening to his bedside, he found him dying. In agony for the fate of his story, the novelist rushed to the office of the newspaper, got hold of some back numbers in order to pick up the threads of the romance and brought it to a speedy end in a few brief chapters. Then he went to the office with the manuscript.

"What's that?" asked the editor.

"Why, the continuation and end of my story."

"Oh, then, you want to change it, I suppose, because, you know, you sent in the last chapters three days ago."

Admirable self possession on the part of the novelist prevented disaster, and he humbly found this explanation: The old man, whose price was 25 centimes a line, had himself subtlet his work to a third writer at 10 centimes, and thus the work had been finished in safety.

Why a Swelling Follows a Blow.

The swelling which follows from a blow is nature's effort to protect the part from further injury and to keep it at rest while repair is going on. What actually takes place at the seat of injury is not even now quite understood. The injury to the smaller blood vessels interferes with the flow of blood through them, and the white corpuscles, with part of the serum, the watery part of the blood, escape into the surrounding tissues. At the same time the blood vessels in the neighborhood dilate, and the increased flow of blood with the thoroughfare obstructed increases the swelling. It is probable that the white corpuscles of the blood pass into the tissues to assist in the repair, as bees or ants assemble at an injury to their storehouse, but with this difference—that the substance of the corpuscles is probably converted into the tissue of repair. From one point of view the human body is only one gigantic colony of individuals and the swelling that follows injury but the work of these to repair the breach.

A Quaint Scotch Wedding Custom.

A quaint wedding custom still prevails in many of the little country towns and mining villages in Scotland. When a wedding is held the contracting parties make their guests pay 10 pence for the eating, drinking and dancing facilities which are usually provided on such occasions. The practice still seems to survive even in Glasgow. A correspondent observed a notice posted up in the Cowcaddens, a low class Glasgow thoroughfare, informing the public that a soldier would shortly enter into the bonds of wedlock and that twopence would be charged for admission to the ceremony and an additional sixpence imposed for attendance at the wedding feast. The practice seems to be peculiarly Scotch, but sixpence certainly seems moderate enough for a marriage supper.—Westminster Gazette.

Bourbon Racers.

Ovelando, Martin Doyle's colt, is the favorite of most of the Lexington turfmen among the Derby candidates at the Lexington track. He certainly has a wonderful turn of speed, and as he is a son of imp. Orlando, sire of Whimsicle, the best long distance mare on the Eastern tracks last season, it is believed he will have no trouble in negotiating the route. The horse which beats Ovelando in the Derby will certainly have to catch him, as he will set a sizzling pace from the start. In his work Saturday he went the first half in :48, the five furlongs in 1:00 4-5, the seven furlongs in a shade over 1:27 and finished a mile in 1:41 2-5, easily. Ovelando will be a sure starter in the mile race for three-year-olds on the first day of the Lexington meeting, and in this will meet Red Gauntlet, Tom Hays' Derby candidate. Many turfmen believe that Red Gauntlet will win the Derby. Ovelando will probably be favorite over him when he starts at Lexington.

Kentucky Beau, the crack Eastern two-year-old stake winner of last year, which is in his owner, Wood Clay's stable at the Lexington track, is receiving a steady preparation under the hands of French Brooks, the stable's colored trainer, as he is meant primarily for his big Eastern engagements. He has not been tightened up yet. His best work has been six furlongs in 1:15. He will hardly be ready for a hard race at the Lexington meeting.

Judge "Jim" on the Stand.

The feature of yesterday in the Britton trial in the Fayette Circuit Court was the testimony of Judge James Hargis who is accredited as the chief-est of one side of the fiercest feuds in Kentucky's history. The witness is called "Jim" by his friends and his presence in court indicated that he is the sort of a man who would enjoy a nickname. His openness of speech and frankness of manner bespoke nothing of a criminal nature but gave the impression of anxious sincerity to tell all he knew. But, in fact, he knew nothing but to deny what Commonwealth witnesses have said. And through it all, it was not hard to detect that the astute politician from Breathitt was carefully guarding his own defense, he also being indicted for complicity in the assassination of James Cockrill.

Among The Arabs.

In a letter to a friend here, Mr. W. Rhodes Shackelford, who married Miss Anna Louise Clay, of this city, and who has been sojourning in Egypt on his honeymoon, speaks of his amusing experiences in attending a meeting of an Arabic Lodge of Masons in Cairo. He was admitted readily enough on his knowledge of the grip and signs, etc., but the proceedings afterward were like Sanskrit to him, as the entire ceremony was carried on in Arabic. He was present at an initiation of candidates, and says that the procedure is very similar to that in this country, but the language of course, escaped him. Mr. Shackelford stated further that he and his wife would start homeward on April 3, but would make short stops in Italy, and elsewhere.

Results Of The Freeze.

Fruit and early vegetation is having a hard time of it this year. The cold spell of last week, while quite severe, came when everything was exceedingly dry and best equipped to resist the frost. While cherries, naches and other of the most tender fruits were doubtless considerably damaged it was thought that much of the crop had escaped. But this will not help us much now as we had another white frost Thursday morning with conditions favoring the destruction of all fruits which had escaped the former freezes. From the present indications the fruit crop in this State is about gone.

Republicans Like Holt.

Reports from out in the State, according to the friends of Judge William H. Holt, indicate that the sentiment for him for the Republican nomination for Governor is rapidly spreading. Judge Holt says that he is not a candidate for the nomination in the sense of making a fight for it, but he would accept the office if it were tendered him. A. E. Wilson, who is also a candidate for the nomination, spent yesterday with Richard P. Ernst, chairman of the Republican State Central Committee, at his home in Covington.

Exposition Opens Friday.

The Jamestown Exposition, commemorating the three hundredth anniversary of the first English settlement in America, will open at Norfolk, Va., on Friday, with President Roosevelt as the guest of honor. The Exposition will continue until November 30.

Wild stories of deluges of rain in Kansas were used successfully in the Chicago wheat market during the last week, and until their falsity was learned, an appreciable effect was noticed on the prices. Authorities are beginning to fear that the winter wheat is injured by the cold weather.

The Court of Appeals has sustained the act of the Legislature, passed at the special session last spring, fixing a tax of one and one-quarter cents a gallon on all rectified whiskey made within Kentucky. Family Difficulty Causes Suicide

Believing that he had killed his sixteen-year-old son, who was lying in the front room of his home, unconscious from a blow struck by his father, William Milton blew out his brains in his home in stamping ground, about ten miles from Georgetown, Sunday afternoon.

The suicide resulted from a quarrel in which the family of Milton engaged owing to objections to a caller who was a friend of Milton's daughter. During the row, Milton knocked down his son, who had interfered between his father and his mother. The boy dropped unconscious and his mother and sister ran from the house, crying that the boy was dead.

Milton rushed into his own room, where he took a pistol from a drawer, placed the muzzle close to his head, behind the ear, and pulled the trigger. The Coroner's jury returned a verdict of death by suicide.

AMONG THE LILACS

By Virginia Leila Wentz

Copyright, 1906, by W. R. Caldwell

It was a warm spring evening, so warm that they had ventured to sit out on the little wooden veranda. There was a suggestion of approaching summer in the breeze, and the air was redolent with lilacs. By glancing toward the right it was not difficult to see where the fragrance came from. On the other side of the hedge in the deepening twilight was a purple forest of plumes, and beyond that, white in the gray light, rose the old Howard house, the oldest in the tiny village as well as the largest. Selden Howard was the only living representative of the family.

Presently the group on Mrs. Jones' veranda began to speak of Selden, leading up to the subject from the fragrance of the bushes.

"Then lilacs is sickly sweet," observed Mrs. Jones herself.

"Really unmeaning," acquiesced the boarder who had been spending the winter here in this little cottage among the Berkshire hills. "By the way, I saw a strange man at the postoffice this morning and I overheard some one say he was Mr. Howard. Very good looking man he was and seemed to know a thing or two."

"That's him," confirmed Mrs. Jones. "But why shouldn't he know a thing or two? He don't do nothing but travel and traipse round the country. Hardly ever home and won't have a thing to do with the people in the village."

The moon was beginning to show red and low in the warm dusk, and the lilacs made superb black shadow effects on the lawn. The little tired city girl who sat on the lowest step of the veranda and who had just arrived that day had nothing to say. She was filling her whole soul with the beauty of the coming night.

Pretty soon, carrying her lamp, she went upstairs to her bedroom. She looked at the high mound of feather bed and at the small window at the foot into which was already flooding the spring moonlight. For a moment she stood irresolute; then she lowered the shade, slipped on a chamois cloth kimono, drew the pins from her hair, letting it fall about her shoulders, blew out the lamp and followed her whim to lean from the casement.

It had been a very long white shawl Katherine Hope had looked from a window over a garden when the moon was shining. True, from the window of their stodge city lodgings on Elym street, her mother's and hers, she had leaned out at times when her head was hot and aching with too much work and had caught a breath of outside air. But that was so different. From that window she could look out only on clotheslines, sheds, the bare windows of the boarding houses on the next street, and there whatever restful thoughts might come to her were hazy of by an accordion, cheap organ songs or the caterwauling of feline creatures on the fences below.

And now—oh, the feather, pale her essence of the lilacs over yonder! Katherine drew her breath in with delight as their dominant scent came up to her. If only her dear mother could be with her to enjoy the beauty of it all! But that had not been possible. When the physician had shaken his head gravely over his young patient's wretched condition and commanded an immediate change in the country it had been all that mother and daughter could do to scrape together the meager savings for Katherine's rest of a fortnight. And Katherine was not one to mew and whimper over impossibilities. She was here now, and she would make the best of every moment to grow strong and well again that she might go back with new life to her office work and the companionship of her sacrificing little mother.

The mild country air and the thousand odors of the spring played upon her face and lifted her loosened hair, gilded by the moonlight into the likeness of an aureole. Her white kimono fell softly around her; from the position in which she held her arms her soft elbows were plainly visible, and her exquisite face, leaning back a bit against the dark painted frame of the window, stood out like a cameo.

The girl was little conscious of anything except the wonder of the night, nor was she aware of one who watched her from a moment from the shadow of the lilacs in the garden beyond the hedge. Selden Howard was returning from his dog kennels, whence he had gone to look after a sick collie, when his eye had chanced to fall upon the figure in the casement, and in sheer artistic appreciation had rested there.

"She's like some young princess," he thought to himself, pursuing his way toward the big house, "or a goddess. Her hair's like the silvery floss around corn. Her name ought to be Perdita, Marpessa or Ariadne. How ever in the world did the Jones family stumble across such a creature?" The glamour of the girl vove itself into his dreams, and in waking intervals he pondered on plans for an acquaintance. "Ah, ha, I have it!" at last laughed he.

Early the next morning he went fishing. As luck would have it, he secured a well filled creel. On his way home, without ceremony, he lifted the latch of Mrs. Jones' low back gate and entered. He walked right up to the kitchen window, for there stood Mrs. Jones rolling the dough for breakfast biscuits.

"Good morning, Mrs. Jones," said he. "I've got such a jolly big creel full of fish here that I don't know what to do with them. There's no one over there"

—nodding toward the big white house—
"but my housekeeper, and she's sick this morning, so I'm wondering if you'll accept these?" With the gallantry of a knight he held out to her his creel.

"Oh, Mr. Selden!" exclaimed the good woman, a bit flustered, but smiling with unmistakable appreciation. "Would the heavens fall next? When had Mr. Selden Howard last honored her humble dwelling like this? Surely not since his father died, poor soul! 'Accept them?' Well, I just guess I will! And so Mrs. Patch is sick! Well, you'll just stay here to breakfast. I'll be all ready in fifteen minutes." This was as much as Howard had hoped for.

"You're awfully kind, Mrs. Jones," he said, affecting surprise. "And yes, I believe I'll stay. I've a sick collie over in the kennels. I'll go back and look after her; then I'll be back to accept your hospitality."

When Katherine Hope entered the dining room Mrs. Jones, of course presented Mr. Howard.

"How do you do, Mr. Howard," said she conventionally, with a smile, a little tired in spite of the play of childish dimples. But Selden was looking down admiringly on the tiny white paring that separated the braids of purest flax.

"And how d'ye like them, Mr. Selden?" asked Mrs. Jones a bit later, referring to the biscuit.

"I love them," answered he, referring to the girl's dimples.

Of course that was only the beginning. After that Selden Howard managed almost daily to meet Katherine, or at least to catch a glimpse of her. Her lovely, tired eyes and little, quiet ways appealed to him in an infinitely more tender and real fashion than had those of many a pampered beauty whom he'd met in the course of his varied travels.

One morning Katherine was reading "The House of Mirth" out on the veranda. At least she was supposed to be reading it. In reality she had closed the book, keeping the page marked with her slim forefinger. She had only two days more here in God's green earth, and the lilacs seemed to be calling her imperatively. She had been breathing in lilacs to that extent that her thoughts seemed to be fairly searced with them. All at once an impulse of yielding came to her. Why in the world should she not step over the low hedge and go into the lilac garden?

She did. Bees humming above the purple bloom, and a little attenuated fountain tinkled in the distance. Oh, it was altogether enchanting. Just then a golden eyed subtle collie came leisurely down the curved walk to meet her.

"You beauty!" cried the girl exultantly, stooping to pat the dog's queasily head. The collie, with slowly swishing tail, gently kissed her behind the ear.

A commanding whistle from around the turn of the walk, and then:

"Mollie, Mollie, old girl, where are you?" Mollie sat with one ear up, the other down, as collies will when perplexed. She loved her master—but also she loved her new found friend.

"Ah!" cried Selden, coming upon them unexpectedly. "But it is beautiful to find you in my garden!" he said, looking gladly upon Katherine. "Do you know, last night I dreamed you were here. You are very, very welcome, little lady."

"You see," she explained helplessly, trying to hide her telltale blushes, "it was the lilacs. They called me."

Suddenly he took both her hands in his and drew her toward the bushes. "Dear lilacs," he whispered enthusiastically, "she is here now—on an enchanted ground—and we must keep her. You belong to my garden," he added masterfully, turning full upon Katherine, "and I will not let you go. The house yonder is very lonely and waits for you. You will stay?"

Her answer? Well, she was a girl and very tired, and he was a man and strong—and it was spring—and they were among the lilacs!

The Kangaroo at Bay.

When pursued the kangaroo, if possible, directs his flight toward the river. If he reaches it, he enters and, thanks to his great height, is able to go on foot to a depth where the dogs are obliged to swim. Then he plants himself on his two hind legs and his tail, and, up to his shoulders in the water, he waits the attack of the dogs. With his fore paws he seizes by the head the first dog that approaches him, and, as he is more solidly balanced than his assailant, he holds the dog's nose under water as long as he can. Unless a second dog speedily comes to the rescue the first one is sure to be drowned. If a companion arrives and by his attacks on the kangaroo manages to set the captive free the half drowned brute is glad to regain the shore as quickly as possible. In this way a strong and courageous male kangaroo will hold his own against twenty or thirty dogs, drowning some and frightening others, and the hunter is obliged to intervene with a bullet.

The Scorpion of Ceylon.

A more disagreeable object than a scorpion of Ceylon it would be difficult to imagine. Although, as a rule, it does not measure more than seven inches in length, there is a species found in the woods that are longer than a foot. They crawl out of some dried wood, and, taking up their position on a convenient rock or stone, look, as they hold their great jointed sting curved over their backs and their claws held aloft, the very picture of aggressive warfare. Here they stretch themselves in the broiling sun and await their prey. These are the small, beautiful flowerbirds that dart from flower to flower and take the place of the humming birds of the east. As one approaches the scorpion seems to shrink into the stone until it becomes almost imperceptible. Suddenly the great insect will raise its claws and dart at its beautiful victim, which in a moment is destroyed.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Is not a secret or patent medicine, against which the most intelligent people are quite naturally averse because of the uncertainty as to their harmless character, but is a medicine of known composition, a full list of all its ingredients being printed in plain English, on every bottle wrapper. An examination of this list of ingredients will disclose the fact that it is non-alcoholic in its composition, chemically pure glycerine taking the place of the commonly used alcohol, in its making. The "Favorite Prescription" of Dr. Pierce is in fact the only medicine put up for the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold through druggists, that does not contain alcohol and that too in large quantities. Furthermore, it is the only medicine for woman's special diseases, the ingredients of which have the unanimous endorsement of all the leading medical writers and teachers of all the several schools of practice, and that too as remedies for the ailments for which "Favorite Prescription" is recommended.

A little book of some of these endorsements will be sent to any address, postpaid, and absolutely free if you request same by postal card or letter, of Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Don't forget that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, for woman's weaknesses and delicate ailments, is not a patent or secret medicine, being the "Favorite Prescription" of a regularly educated and graduated physician, engaged in the practice of his chosen specialty—that of diseases of women—that its ingredients are printed in plain English on every bottle wrapper; that it is the only medicine especially designed for the cure of woman's diseases that contains no alcohol, and the only one that has a professional endorsement worth more than all the so-called "testimonials" ever published for other medicines. Send for these endorsements as above. They are free for the asking.

If you suffer from periodical headache, backache, dizziness, pain or dragging down sensation low down in the abdomen, weak back, have disagreeable and weakening catarrhal, pelvic drain, or are in distress from being long on your feet, then you may be sure of benefit from taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Cinnamon Toppers.

Both cinnamon and cassia contain tannin, and too much of either has the same effect as excessive tea drinking. There are cinnamon and cassia toppers who are as much addicted to the habit of chewing the bark as some men are to chewing tobacco. The cinnamon toppers acquire their habit chiefly from working in the woods stripping the bark from the trees and drying it. It is graded by men who taste a tiny morsel of each lot. At first this causes the lips and throat to swell, but in time this undesirable effect overcomes itself, and a genuine love for the bark is acquired.

Extenuating.

A Frenchman was convicted of killing his mother-in-law. When asked if he had anything to say for himself before taking sentence, he said, "Nothing, excepting I lived with her twenty-one years and never did it before."

IN THE FIRELIGHT.

By Margaret Lester.

Copyright, 1907, by Homer Sprague.

For a minute it seemed to him as if his beautiful plans were tumbling about his ears, just as the card houses of his childhood had fallen flat at the moment when victory perched on their gable ends. But as the boy had patiently rebuilt the card houses, so now Tom Graham resolutely set to rearrange his air castles of matrimonial happiness.

"Of course, Nellie, I'd rather you wouldn't work at all. No real man likes his wife to earn her living. But if you're set on staying at the factory a few months longer, why, let's get married anyhow, and you and I can do the work together night and morning somehow and take our dinners at the hotel on Sundays."

"Not much," replied pretty Nellie Dinsmore, patting the carpet nervously with her beaded slipper. "I'd be a fright in no time trying to work day and night. As soon as you get twenty a week, twice what I'm getting now, I'm ready to give up my job. After having ten a week to spend just on myself there's no use talking about the two of us living on $17.50 per week, with taxes and insurance to pay and the cottage needing painting. If you really loved me, you'd sell the place. Tim Sullivan's dying to buy it. Then we'd furnish up a couple of rooms here in the hotel and live in style. Mrs. Conroy'd give us a special rate."

"Of $14 a week, leaving $3.50 for clothes and incidentals."

"Well, there's the money you get for the place," Graham's face turned stern, and Nellie added hastily: "Or I'd stay at the factory until you got your raise, and then maybe we could find another place. Anyhow, we'd be putting money in bank."

Tom Graham bent over and took both the girl's hands in his.

"Nellie, dear, I've some old fashioned ideas about marriage and—yes, I don't want you to live in a hotel after we're married, with nothing to do but listen to the gossip of Mrs. Conroy and her sort. I want a home."

Nellie flung aside his hands angrily.

"Oh, well, of course, if you want a home and not a wife you might hire one of the McCarthy sisters—they're past forty and won't make gossip—to keep house for you. But as for me, I don't marry until I see something besides dishwashing in a shabby cottage before me."

Graham was very white now. In the days gone by they had played in that "shabby cottage," oh, how happily! It had been Nellie's one refuge from an unhappy, fearful mother, who had first driven her husband to drink and then followed him to a premature grave.

Something like an illuminating message flashed through his being. If he forced Nellie into a marriage that appeared distasteful to her, she might become as dissatisfied and fearful as her mother. He rose abruptly. He could not picture Nellie in tears, but there were little lines around her mouth at this moment that he did not like. He loved her, but he did not propose to wreck two lives in a futile attempt to try out the love in a cottage plan. Neither would he give up his tiny ancestral home, sole legacy of loving parents.

Nellie had been happy there only a few months before, when she had boarded with his widowed mother, but when the latter had died Nellie had taken up her quarters, with a number of other girls from the shoe factory, at a second class hotel. Somehow Tom felt she had changed from the day she stepped over the hotel's threshold, and he glared back at his brightly lighted bathroom and dimly lighted parlor as he stood out in the middle of the street.

Tom was telegraph operator at the depot, and his cottage was not far from the tracks. The main street of the town led past both, so Tom seldom missed seeing Nellie each night and morning as she went to and from work. Once as she passed the cottage he was washing his few dishes, and he saw her toss her head and quicken her steps. More often, however, he was at his post in the depot. He hoped against hope that she would drop him a forgi-ing line or fling him a ball of friendship as she passed the depot. Instead each week he heard more of Nellie's social popularity. The boys at the new suspender factory organized a club and gave a dance. Nellie was the belle of the evening. Miss McCarthy, who had come over to the cottage to do some scrubbing, told him all about it, concluding with a graphic description of the wonderful new frock which Nellie had ordered from the city.

That afternoon the weather changed suddenly. The snow came down first in a soft swirling cloud, then with crisp, needlelike insistence. Tom threw more coal into the depot stove and made a quick run home to take the garments out of the window. When he came back to the station he knew that a blizzard was closing down on Ridgefield. He wondered how Nellie would get home, and then Syracuse called, and he had to put his thoughts on his work.

It took all his strength to reach the cottage across the track. His first instinct was to close all shutters and draw the curtains, but he remembered his mother's custom of setting a lamp in the window for those who might be abroad on stormy nights. Such a cozy little kitchen as it lighted, with a fire snapping in the old fashioned cook stove which Miss McCarthy polished to brilliancy at each visit!

He hummed contentedly as he sat over the teakettle and brought the bread and butter from the pantry. Then he stopped short and listened intently. What was that scratching noise at the door—yes—and now the sound of a muffled fall?

He flung open the door, and the wind blew out his lamp, but against the blur of the snow he saw a dark figure huddled on his doorstep.

He carried the woman indoors, laid her on the old fashioned settle and re-lighted his lamp. Then, with something like a groan, he sprang back to the inert form. It was Nellie!

Fifteen minutes later a white and very quiet Nellie sat before the snapping fire with blankets wrapped around her still trembling figure and a cavalier in short sleeves serving her tea and toast.

"And now tell me how it happened," Tom said, with authority.

"I didn't realize it was storming so dreadfully, and my machine broke down just before closing time. The foreman—the new man, you know, from Boston—said that if I wanted to make up the time I'd lost—I'm doing piecework now—he had some extra work to do, too, and he'd see I got home all right. I was sort of glad to stay, because it's fierce to go home to a cold room in the hotel a night like this, and when you have a headache you just hate to sit evenings in the parlor with a lot of folks and the piano jangling. So I stayed, but—but"—her voice was low and tear heavy—"on the way down the stairs—he—he tried to kiss me, and then I ran through the snow, sort of blind, I guess, and the first thing I didn't know where I was. I just saw the light—I didn't know it was your cottage."

Pride struggled with relief in her tired voice.

"Have some more tea," said Tom simply, and then for some minutes he busied himself around the room, standing before her at last in his heaviest outdoor raiment.

"Where are you going? Please don't leave me alone."

"This storm is no joke, Nellie," he said quietly. "First I've got to get in fuel to last us all night and perhaps longer. Then, before we're snowed in for fair, I'm going to bring over the Rev. Mr. Gary." Nellie rose uncertainly to her feet. "Now, don't get flurried. You've had your lesson, and I've had mine, and we're going to be married tonight. You can't get to the hotel in this storm, thank God, and you can't stay here except as my wife"—his voice turned suddenly tender—"and I want you to be my wife."

Nellie rubbed her face against his shabby, fuzzy overcoat. "All right, dear," she said docilely, and then, even as his arms closed around her, she murmured: "Tom, dear, this shiny fire looks so good and homelike. Those registers up at the hotel sort of give you a chill."

And then Tom knew that the cottage looked shabby no longer.

Large Ears of Forest Animals.

Within the limits of particular groups large ears may be taken, as a rule, to indicate either great powers of hearing or the necessity of catching every wave of sound. Thus, forest dwelling animals generally have much larger, and especially broader, ears than their relatives inhabiting open country. An excellent instance of this is afforded by the okapi of the Semliki forest, as contrasted with the giraffe of the more open districts of Africa—the ears in the one case being excessively broad and leaflike, while in the other they are comparatively narrow and pointed. Similarly Grevy's zebra, which inhabits scrub jungles in Somaliland and northeast Africa generally, has much larger and wider ears than the ordinary zebra of the open veldt.—Scientific American.

Everybody Happy.

Fater—You are disgracefully lazy. It's queer that you don't take after me. There's nothing I like so well as to work and make money.

Filius—And there's nothing I like so well as to spend it. We both should be satisfied. And yet you kick!—Cleveland Leader.

Springy.

"That's a fancy suit you have on," remarked the visitor in the dressing tent of the big circus.

"Yes," laughed the acrobat who jumps over six elephants every performance: "I call that my spring suit."—Chicago News.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address: F. J. The song service is one of the features of the meeting that is enjoyed by all, and is very impressive. Of Vital Importance.

The Scientific American gives the recipe, which the whole world ought to know: At the first indication of diphtheria in the throat of a child, make the room close, take a tin cup and put into it a quantity of tar and turpentine, equal parts. Then hold the cup over a fire, so as to fill the room with fumes. The little patient, on inhaling the fumes will cough up and spit out all the membranous matter and the diphtheria will pass out. The fumes of the tar and turpentine loosens the matter in the throat and thus affords the relief that has baffled the skill of physicians.

A Quiet Wedding.
